The text of those sections of Title 35, U.S. Code not included in this action can be found in a prior Office action.

35 U.S.C. 101 reads as follows:

Whoever invents or discovers any new and useful process, machine, manufacture, or composition of matter, or any new and useful improvement thereof, may obtain a patent therefor, subject to the conditions and requirements of this title.

Claim 1 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, first paragraph, as failing to comply with the written description requirement. The claim(s) contains subject matter which was not described in the specification in such a way as to reasonably convey to one skilled in the relevant art that the inventor(s), at the time the application was filed, had possession of the claimed invention. This rejection is repeated for reasons already of record (e.g., Office action mailed June 13, 2008, page 2, third full paragraph). Applicants' arguments (response filed December 11, 2008, pages 4-8) are not convincing because although applicants are correct that the instant application does not explicitly incorporate the information about the S. cerevisiae strain C288C genome by reference, all of applicants' arguments depend upon such information for proper interpretation of the claimed invention. Applicants seek benefit of what amounts to an improper incorporation by reference (at least in relation to applicants' arguments in this record), yet applicants complain that since no specific and explicit incorporation by reference is made in the application, applicants should be permitted to rely on what is known in the art. However, what is or was known in the art and what applicants might have meant by the S. cerevisiae strain C288C genome, is not known with clarity without referring to a non-patent reference. Thus, the claim is not adequately described in writing as required by 35 U.S.C. § 112, first paragraph.

Claim 1 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, first paragraph, as failing to comply with the enablement requirement. The claim(s) contains subject matter which was not described in the specification in such a way as to enable one skilled in the art to which it pertains, or with which it is most nearly connected, to make and/or use the invention. This rejection is repeated for reasons already of record (e.g., Office action mailed June 13, 2008, page 2, fourth full paragraph). The discussion in the previous rejection is incorporated here.

Claim 1 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, second paragraph, as being indefinite for failing to particularly point out and distinctly claim the subject matter which applicant regards as the invention. The claim is incomplete.

- (a) The claim is incomplete because claim 1 refers to amino acid sequences encoded by S. cerevisiae strain C288C genes. This rejection is repeated for reasons already of record (e.g., Office action mailed June 13, 2008, page 3, item (a)). The discussion of the previous two rejections is incorporated here.

Claim 1 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 101 because the claimed invention is directed to non-statutory subject matter. The instant claim is drawn to a "non-transformative process that encompasses a purely mental process" (e.g., see In re Bilski, 545 F3d 943, 88 USPQ2d 1385 (Fed. Cir.) at page 1399). The claimed process is merely a mental process (or a process practiced with the aid of a computer) in comparing sequence data and in drawing a conclusion based upon the comparison. No particular apparatus is needed to practice the method and no transformation takes place as a result of the comparison.

Claim 1 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Olesen et al (FEMS Yeast Research 2: 563 (2000) in view of Nakagawa et al (U.S. Patent Application Publication 2006/0228712). This rejection is repeated for reasons already of record (e.g., Office action mailed June 13, 2008, page 4, first full paragraph). Applicants' arguments (response filed December 11, 2008, pages 8-10) are not convincing because applicants do not argue the references in the manner in which they were used in the rejection. In addition, since computers are routinely used to search and compare nucleic acid and amino acid sequence data (see Mount, Bioinformatics, 2001, Cold Spring Harbor Laboratory Press, Cold Spring Harbor, New York, pp. 6-9, 64-76, and 315-317, cited here as of interest), it is not necessary for Nakagawa et al to single out any particular organism (i.e., S. cerevisiae strain C288C) for comparison since data from all disclosed organisms may and can readily be compared.
